OBSERVATIONS

THE old west is not yet dead. Witnesseth: After dinner—noon dinner—you sit on the porch half-dozing. Over the hills come three neighbors, a father and his two weather-tanned sons. They wear chaps, with nickel, heart-shaped fasteners. Mr. Pierson advises them that he has a few untamed horses on the hillsides that he would like to have trained to leather. The neighbors agree to help. The horses are rounded up and driven into a corral—twenty-four of them, young, bony equines of the great outdoors. A strong buckskin is selected. The three with great difficulty get him saddled. They lead him from the corral. The elder lad mounts. The buckskin bucks. The lad sticks. For fifteen minutes a titanic battle between man and horse ensues, until the mesa earth is churned with the marks of the animal's hoofs. Finally with blazing eye a little dimmed the horse admits defeat. The sweating boy rides him exultantly hither and yon. You shake hands with the neighbors. Their eyes are blue and clear. They mount and ride away over the hills on some cattle business. They turn in their saddles and wave widely. The old west is not altogether dead.

IN such a place sleep calls early and you retire at 9—an hour after the ranch hands have sought their beds. As you drift peacefully into sleep the Spring frogs creek to you in high falsetto. You turn just once in bed to assume a restful position and listen to the frogs again. Your eyes strike the window. Far out over the valley the dancing dawn "stands tiptoe on the mountain top." Larks lift their voices in enraptured song. Wide-eyed and alive with wonder you drink in the adventure of a valley world awakening to another Springtime day. The miracle of Life is all about you, singing its wondrous music to your ears. With quickened pulse you lie enthralled by the vibrant song. Ducks quack on the stream. The small black mule in the barnyard speaks to his fat gray mare mother. The turkey flock struts up the lane, a great ruffled fellow all puffed out and showing off before his ladies. General Gander leads his pageant of noisy geese to their matutinal abductions. "The ranch hands' feet crunch fulsomely on the gravel drive. Anything to milk the cows. A horse whinnies on the far-away hills. The bird songs swell in volume as the life-loving sun wells up out of the colored liquid that paints the mountain crests. Up from the kitchen mysteriously seeps the pungent odor of bacon, wheat-cakes, coffee! Thump! Thump! Two city folks hit the deck.

School Observes Arbor Day Here With Exercises

Shrubs Donated by C. of C. Planted by Children Tuesday

Torrance Elementary School observed Arbor Day Wednesday with a fitting program, opened with a song, "America the Beautiful," by the school children. On the program were several readings: "Trees," by Miss Berry's class; "Anticipation," by Miss Thomas' class; "Three Trees," by five pupils of Miss Mathews' class; and the song "Trees," by Miss Haskins' class. Dr. Charles Edwards, head of the nature study department of the Los Angeles city schools, gave an entertaining talk to the youngsters on the subject of birds, appealing to them to help protect these beautiful creatures in every possible way. Dr. Edwards was introduced by Carl L. Hyde, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Hyde also presented the school with four beautiful shrubs and gave a short talk in behalf of the chamber. The shrubs were planted by some of the school children, and "The Star Spangled Banner," sung by the audience, brought to a close the enjoyable program, which was given under the direction of Mr. Reeve, the school garden teacher.

Lomita Chamber Meeting Rocked By Big Turmoil

J. A. Smith Storm Center in Fight Over Parkways Project

Turmoil reigned momentarily at the Lomita Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night and motions shot thick and fast when A. F. Welton rose to a point of order while J. A. Smith was speaking in favor of the Hollywood-Palos Verdes Parks and Parkway project. Mr. Smith rose to his feet after J. P. Christien and W. A. Teagarden had spoken against the project. While Mr. Smith was seeking to tell why Lomita should favor the project Mr. Welton interrupted, saying that the meeting was called for the purpose of hearing arguments against and not in favor of the project. Make Three Motions Three motions were quickly made from the floor. One was a motion to adjourn. One was a motion in favor of continued discussion of the project pro and con, and a third was that the chamber go on record against the project. The motion to adjourn was defeated. The motion for further discussion was never put. The motion placing the chamber as opposed to the project was carried. The original tract agent of Lomita, thus checked from discussing the project, said: "If this is what you call an open meeting, then I am happy that I am not counted among you of this organization." Mr. Christien retorted: "I am glad that J. A. Smith has stated publicly that he is not a member of this organization." Many of the Lomitans present had come to the meeting direct from a gathering sponsored by an organization that teaches the doctrine of brotherly love. In an interview with The News after the meeting J. A. Smith said: "If the Chamber of Commerce is opposed to the parkways proposition, that is their business. But when the Chamber of Commerce advertises an open meeting and then prevents discussion pro and con of a subject of such importance one way or another to Lomita, then that organization ceases to be representative of the people of Lomita." See Incorporation Move That a move for incorporation of Lomita will soon be launched here is anticipated in many quarters. No direct move, according to those close to Lomita affairs, has been made, but it is asserted that plans for an organized effort to incorporate Lomita as a city have been perfected and that the groundwork is already being made ready.

Breaks Two Ribs In Auto Crash

Clyde Barnes, a carpenter employed with W. L. Reeve, sustained two broken ribs and minor hurts when he backed his car onto the P. E. tracks at Double and Cabrillo avenues. Clyde says "backing onto the tracks wouldn't have amounted to anything if a P. E. train hadn't happened along just at that time." The car was not badly damaged.

Methodist Ladies Spend Busy Day

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church held an all-day meeting Tuesday at the beautiful home of Mrs. Edmund Smith, 1423 Post avenue. The day began at 9:30 a. m. Sewing and fancy work occupied the hours until noon, when a very delicious lunch was served cafeteria style. The regular business meeting opened promptly at 2 p. m. with devotionals, after which business was transacted and many plans were made for the near future. A picnic to the Methodist David Margaret Home is planned for some time in April; also a progressive dinner to be given the 26th of this month. Further announcements will be made in the next issue of this paper. Three new names have been added to the membership roll.
